

NL Employers' Council Presents
An Introduction to Labour Standards....and Beyond

A Workshop for Employers
Thursday, March 25th at St. Jude Hotel, Clarenville

WHO: Richard Alexander, Executive Director, NL Employers' Council (NLEC)
Ron Croucher, Labour Standards Officer, Labour Standards Division,
Government of Newfoundland & Labrador
Jennifer Bradbury, LLB, Employer Advisor, NL Employers' Council

WHAT: Employers in the Clarenville region will participate in a workshop on Labour Standards this Thursday. This session will provide understanding of Labour Standards Legislation and its implication in the workplace, going beyond the basics to outline the grey areas not covered by the Labour Standards Act and what to do in areas where the Act is silent. The session will address such issues as: terminations, leave and benefits, hours of work, statutory holidays and more.

WHEN: Thursday, Mar 25, 2010
1-4 PM

WHERE: St. Jude Hotel
Clarenville, NL

WHY: The NLEC offers an advisory service to employers providing free information, assistance and advice to all employers in the province on workers' compensation, occupational health and safety, claims management, and appeals. The NLEC also provides help to members on labour relations, labour standards and human resource management issues. The organization gets numerous calls from members with questions on areas where the labour standards act may not outline specifics on how an employer should handle a situation. The NLEC is offering this session in Clarenville, and again in St. John's on June 8th, in an effort to answer some of these challenging questions for employers.
